Why Career Growth? Why Now?

Global Trends

Operating Priorities: Speed & Agility

- Flatter organizations → Fewer leadership layers → Fewer open ‘next level’ roles
- Rapidly shifting skills & needs → Roles change more frequently → Fewer stable “next level” roles

→ Upward mobility bottleneck

Team Member Feedback in Peakon

Office Focus Area: Career Path Driver (6.9/10)

“I would like to see more lateral paths for more clarity on areas of opportunity.”

Hardly ever hear from my leader. Seems like my leader likes to check boxes rather than be actively engaged in my career development. Surprise feedback at review should not really be happening."

“If the ladder is true, I may spend over ten years in the same role before an opportunity opens up. And to me that is too long – I need some sort of opportunity for change or I'll get burnt out.”

“It’s difficult to understand what steps are needed to advance or what opportunities are realistically available. In smaller departments, this becomes even more challenging. Because teams operate very lean, there often isn’t room for upward movement unless new roles are created.”

“My leader never discusses my development.”

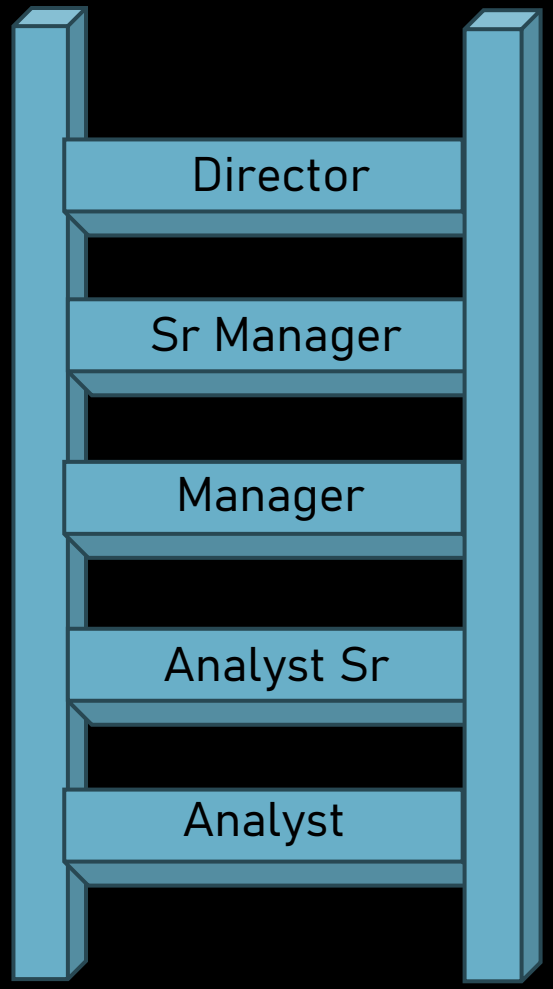

There's no development...there's no growing plan...my leader never had a conversation with me about what is coming for me, what could be my next growing opportunities. I don't feel any support to keep growing, disappointed about my leader support on this topic."

Career Growth Today: A Reality

Reality #1	Reality #2	Reality #3
Team members want to grow—and they look to their leaders to help make that growth possible. When they feel stuck, they may leave the organization.	An obvious next step is not always available, particularly in flatter organizations where shifting priorities can make higher-level roles less predictable.	Limiting growth to upward movement can unintentionally shut down development. Broader growth paths keep it moving.

"It can be discouraging for employees to feel stuck in the same role, and difficult for managers when no next-step opportunities are available."

Board/ Community Involvement	My Career Growth	Gig on a new team or project
EBRG involvement/ Leadership	Lateral Move	Meeting Exposure

Focus is on meaningful experiences and breadth

What is your role as a leader?

CURIOSITY
Questions matter more than answers

- What types of project have you enjoyed over the past year?
- What interests or skills do you have that aren't currently being leveraged?
- Are there any skills you are hoping to develop?

CONSISTENCY
Frequency matters more than formality

- Keep growth conversations ongoing throughout the year
- Use 15–20-minute monthly check-ins, with flexibility to evolve over time
- Debrief after a project, shadow, or meeting: "What did you learn that could help you grow in your role?"

Practice Scenarios

SITUATION

Team member wants people leadership experience

WHAT COULD YOU SUGGEST?

Ideas: onboarding new team members, mentoring, coaching peers, leading team meetings, leading a project, joining an EBRG leadership team.

SITUATION

Team member is interested in a new area of the business

WHAT COULD YOU SUGGEST?

Ideas: Suggest job shadowing, cross-functional projects, or meetings with leaders in that area.

SITUATION

Team member wants stronger communication skills

WHAT COULD YOU SUGGEST?

Ideas: Suggest presenting to the team, facilitation, or leading a knowledge-sharing session.

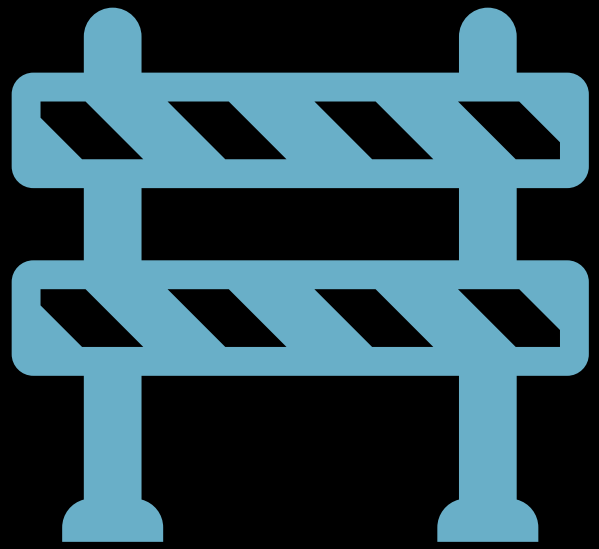

SITUATION

Team member seems bored or unchallenged

WHAT COULD YOU SUGGEST?

Ideas: Suggest a new assignment, problem-solving effort, or work outside normal scope. Cross-train or rotate team's work, so team members get to experience different work on the team.

What do you see as the biggest barriers to adopting a more creative approach to growth?

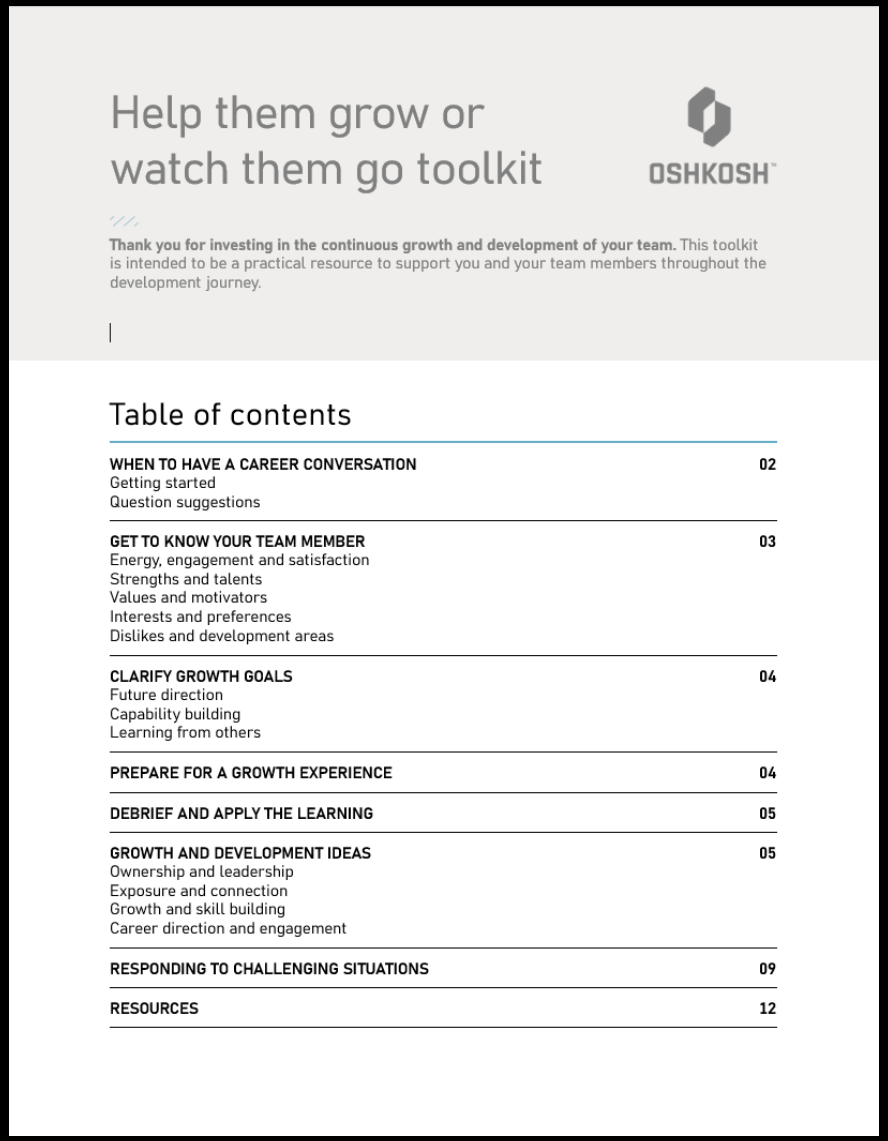

Share in the chat so Talent Partners and peers can respond.
